Critical notes

Heinrich Ernst Grosmann

Heinrich Ernst Grosmann (1732–1811) grew up and received his school education in Haderslev, at that time a town in the duchy of Schleswig under the reign of the Danish King. 1754 he graduated from the grammar school and travelled to Jena (in the duchy of Saxony) with a recommendation from his headmaster. He studied at the Jena university for 4 years. Upon his return he served as a private tutor at manor houses incl. *Tjele*¹ until 1760 where he was appointed cantor and teacher for elementary school classes at the grammar school associated with the cathedral of the Danish town Aarhus. Through the years he was promoted and 1781 was appointed vice headmaster of the grammar school after having passed a masters degree at the university of Copenhagen.² Grosmann retired as vice headmaster 1789 after having lost his sight but was allowed to carry on his work as cantor³

At that time the church choirs of the Danish cathedrals consisted of disciples from the grammar schools. In Aarhus the most talented among them received extra music education from the cantor.⁴ It was his among the duties of Grosmann as a cantor to prepare musical performances at the major festivals in the 2 churches in Aarhus. For that purpose he adapted existing works by composers like Georg Philipp Telemann by underlaying them Danish text, most likely in his own translation and inbetween also changing their instrumentation.⁵ But he also contributed with compositions of his own.

A Part of his collection of scores and parts still exists. It was later donated to the State Library of Aarhus⁶ where it is preserved along with a collection of early 19th century scores from the library of the Aarhus grammar school.⁷ Unfortunately the Grosmann collection has still not been catalogued by the State Library, But it is partially registered in RISM⁸

The music reflects the repertoire Grosmann grew up with in his own school days. It appears old fashioned and is hardly musically significant. But as stated by a late music librarian of the State Library: "Often the music history characteristic of an era emerges more clearly through the works of minor minds."⁹

Grosmann played an important role in the music performances taking place in Aarhus around 1760¹⁰ in the house of count Frederik Danneskiold-Samsøe (1703–1770).¹¹

"Cantata on January 1 1801"

This edition is the first modern edition of Grosmann's cantata, Cantata Paa 1^{ste} Januarij 1801 i Anledning af det Nittende-Aarhundredes Indtraædelse, composed 1800 to celebrate the start of the nineteenth century.¹²

The performance of the cantata on Thursday January 1 1801 was reviewed a week later in the local newspaper

The last New Year feast was celebrated in both Aarhus churches with song and sermons as prescribed. Before the sermon was performed a cantata prepared for the occasion by mr. vice headmaster Grosmann. The hymns were accompanied by instruments, particularly the song 'O store Gud vi love dig'¹³ by timpani and trumpets, all of which was very well executed.

The audience in the churches was numerous, and nothing was missing in the order, calmness and decency required by the purpose of the day.¹⁴

The cantata is scored for vocal soloists,¹⁵ four-part mixed choir, 2 clarinets, 2 clarini (natural trumpets), 2 trombones (alto and tenor), 2 violins and organ continuo. Grosmann lived and worked in Aarhus housing a town musicians corps the members of which played all these instruments.¹⁶ Among their duties was to regularly assist the cantor at the church music.¹⁷ Trombones may seem oldfashioned instruments compared to music composed around 1760 but Grosmann's instrumentation reflects the capabilities of the town musicians.

In a preface Grosmann explains how he adopted the music from his "Jubel Music" from 1760¹⁸ for the centenary of Danish absolutism:

Short of complete instruments I altered Choro Adagio from Jubel-Musick from 1760: where the cornett and first trumpet play the tune I arranged them for clarinet 1 in A, and out of trombone 1 and trumpet 2 came clarinet 2. The music for trombone 2 (or the tenor trombone) was omitted or played by the alto trombone (or trombone 1). The music for trombone 3 (or bass trombone) was played by the tenor trombone. The last aria in $\frac{3}{8}$ time was transposed to D \sharp . The violins were tuned a semitone higher, ie d after organ c, and the trumpets had crooks in D.¹⁹

The preserved manuscripts do not fully reflect these remarks: in the initial "Coro" there is no tenor trombone part in the score nor among the separate parts. And there are no trombone parts at all in the concluding "Choral". The editor has reconstructed a part for alto trombone in the "Choral" movement in analogy with the middle part role of this instrument in the "choro" movement. The tenor trombone part has been reconstructed in both movements by doubling the "Basso" (organo) part in the sections where the alto trombone is playing. There is no mentioning af timpani in the preface nor any timpani part preserved. However, as appears from the news paper review timpani were actually in use during the service, so the editor has reconstructed timpani parts for the "Coro" and "Aria" movements as copies of the corresponding movements in the 1760 cantata and for the Choral movement in analogy with the timpani part of the Choral movement of the 1760 cantata.

There is no music preserved for the "Aria" movement, but there is an aria text in a document containing the text for all movements. Since this text is a variant of the correponding aria in "Jubel Music" it has been possible to reconstruct this movement as indicated in the preface replacing the 1760 text by the text variant. Only few melisma changes were required. Taken into account that the "Aria" from "Jubel Music" was transposed a semitone down from E \flat to fit the key of the 1801 Cantata, D major, it may appear confusing that Grosmann writes about violins tuned a semitone higher. The editor's best explanation is that the music was played on instruments specifically adapted to the Aarhus church organs, at that time both tuned in high choir pitch, D.²⁰ In the original key, E \flat major, the second violin part has several tones G to be played on the open low G string. With the music transposed a semitone down this part will go below the range of the instrument. In order to adapt to conventionally tuned violins the editor has modified the music around these tones. This modern edition offers additional parts for violins with all strings tuned a semitone lower. These parts, notated in E \flat major, are unchanged replicas of the violin parts from "Jubel Music". Likewise the modern edition offers alternative clarinet parts for the "Aria" movement replacing the trumpet parts in analogy with the clarinet parts of the "Coro" movement.

The manuscripts comprise two musically identical versions of the recitative, one version (RECB) written by the same hand as the majority of the manuscripts and another version (RECA) most likely written written by the same scribe, who also wrote the 2 clarino parts. The text of the latter version conforms with the text in a document (TEXT) containing the litterary cantata texts. The editor assumes that the former version was the one initially intended for performance but that this text had to be replaced shortly before the performance.

Forsamlingen i Kirkerne var meget talrig, og savnedes intet i den Orden, Rolighed og Anstændighed, som Dagens Hensigt udfordrede." Aarhuus Stifts Adresse-Contoirs Tidender, Onsdagen den 7de Januarii 1801.

¹⁵In the manuscripts all parts for soprano, alto and tenor are notated in soprano clefs, and the voice types of the recitative and aria movements are not specified. The editor assumes that these movements are to be performed by the same voice type as in "Jubel Music", ie. soprano and tenor.

¹⁹I Mangel af fuld Besætning, forandrede jeg Choro Adagio af Jubel-Musicken 1760 saaledes: Cornetten og 1^{te} Trompet, hvor de har Melodien, satte jeg for Clarinetto 1^{mo} i A, og af Trombone 1^{mo} og 2^{den} Trompet, blev Clarinetto 2^{do}. Trombone 2^{do} eller Tenor Basonen, blev udladt og blæst på Alt Basonen eller Trombono 1^{mo}. Bass Basonen eller Trombone 3^{die}, blev blæst paa Tenor Basonen. ²⁰See footnote ²².

Maybe caused by scruples with the concluding words “Bøn for Fædrelandets Vel, for Kongen og hans Søn” (prayer for the good of the fatherland, the king and his son). Due to the mental illness of the nominal king, Christian VII (1749–1808), his son Frederik (1768–1839), the later king Frederik VI, had been the real, but unofficial regent since 1784. At New Year 1801 two boys had been born to the crown prince since his wedding 1790 with princess Marie Sophie Frederikke (1767–1852). Both boys died shortly after birth and so did two of their daughters.²¹ Since everyone knew who was the real regent it may have been highly inappropriate to pray for ‘the son of the king’.

Most of the existing manuscripts are written by the same hand, a professionally skilled copyist. Exceptions are the clarino parts and the primary version of the recitative, both of them apparently written by the same different hand.

There are no separate parts for the vocal soloist and there is no separate part for stringed bass instruments (violoncello, double bass) among the manuscripts. Most likely they were not used in the performance in 1801. The Basso part in this edition is just a replication of the organ continuo part without figured bass digits.

This modern edition is primarily based on the separate parts for a couple of reasons: 1) The separate parts probably reflect the music that was actually performed more closely than the full score, 2) there are discrepancies between the instrumental parts in the full score and the music found in the separate parts, 3) the “Violino 2^{do}” part is missing in the full score.

Dynamics present either in the full score or in a separate parts are reflected in this modern edition. Dynamics and ornaments added by the editor are within angled brackets.
