HOME SHORES.

The crowds like dancing motes go by;
Tired hearts and threadbare coats go by:
But in my dreams the boats go by
The rugged shores I love.

I see the crags a-tow'ring there;
The purple storm-clouds low'ring there;
The little sea-pinks flow'ring there;
Grey rocks and silent cove.

I speak my native tongue again;
I feel my cold hand wrung again;
I hear the old songs sung again;
The windy shore I roam.

Oh, some have smiles to spare for me;
And some have ceased to care for me:
But you still breathe a prayer for me.
Dear Heart, you call me home!
